ao
If the selling order is not contracted on the same day, same order is generated by computer every day until the selling order is concluded. If the order is contracted, the account remainder and share residual quantity are amended, step 320, and the computer discriminates whether or not the condition is met according to the previously set-up second automatic trade condition. If the second condition is met, a new order is immediately generated. In other words, as soon as the first a trade is concluded, a second trade order is actually created. A stock trade order is automatically generated by the computer as much as the automatic trade condition is established according to this method. When the established automatic trade
